Set up watersheds

It appears that Wasco County and the City of Portland had foresight enough to protect their watersheds. Apparently, Hood River County left that to wishful thinking.

Should the permit to Mt. Hood Meadows development be denied, there shall probably be further development applications.

A solution to that event may be to have the county and the water districts in the county attempt to establish watersheds for the varying districts. There may be such opportunities available to forestall the devastation of the district's clients' water sources.
